Philosophers talk about the concept of a "philosophical zombie" - a hypothetical being which looks like a person from the outside, but has no inside. A being which exhibits the external signs of intelligence, will, etc., but which lacks any corresponding internal experiences.

r/Christianity - Could Satan be a philosophical zombie?

"There is a Christian obligation to be politically involved, given the Christian command to love our neighbor," Wear said. "It's fine for Christians to place themselves within institutions and steward the influence that they've been given in a way that they think is best-oriented toward the good of their neighbors."
